

Murie Audubon Society

QUESTION—How do I join National Audubon and what happens when I do?

ANSWER—Application forms are available at the Audubon Center at Garden Creek. After you've joined, and through the magic of zip codes, National Audubon will enroll you as a member in your local chapter, of which the Murie Audubon Society is one of about 500 (there are six other chapters in Wyoming). Thus, with one application you've joined two entities and automatically receive both Audubon Magazine and Plains and Peaks.

QUESTION—How do I join Audubon Wyoming?

ANSWER—You don't. Audubon Wyoming is a state office of the National Audubon Society.

QUESTION—How do I join the Murie Audubon Society?

ANSWER—There are two ways, the first through joining National and the second by becoming "A Friend of Murie Audubon" by means of donating $10 or more, which covers the cost of printing and mailing the Plains and Peaks Newsletter, any surplus going to support the Society's programs. When you join Murie Audubon Society through the "Friend" gateway, it is important to know that your name is not shared with other organizations, including Audubon Wyoming (National Audubon).

QUESTION—How do I join the Audubon Center at Garden Creek?

ANSWER—You don't. National Audubon currently leases the Audubon Center on Garden Creek from the Bailey family for a nominal fee, plus payment of utilities. The Murie Audubon Society is allowed free use of the Center for its meetings and classes, and in return provides volunteers to help with the Center's educational mission, building and ground maintenance, and bird feeding. From time to time Murie contributes money to help with specific programs.

QUESTION—As an individual, how can I make a monetary contribution to the Audubon Center?

ANSWER—Write a check to Audubon Wyoming, which administers the Center, and note at the bottom "for ACGC." Then deliver or mail the check to Wanda Peters, ACGC, 101 Garden Creek Rd, Casper 82601.

QUESTION—How can I contribute money to the Murie Audubon Society?

ANSWER—Write a check in favor of MAS. Unless designated for a specific purpose, funds will be used where most needed. Memorials go to Murie's Endowment Fund, administered by the Wyoming Community Foundation.
